

Que-43. Why do you use the zip ()method in python?

Python's zip() function creates an iterator that will aggregate elements from two or more iterables. You can use the resulting iterator to quickly and consistently solve common programming problems, like creating dictionaries.